MADE HIM AID HIS HORSE.

Montreal Woman Saves an Animal from a Brutal Driver.

Sleighs drawn by four horses are employed on the Wellington street road, says the Montreal Star. The heavily loaded sleigh was coming cityward. One of the horses next the vehicle fell. The driver lashed it with his whip. Then he kicked it. Finally he swore at it. But he did not get down to extricate the animal from the harness which held it prisoner. The men in the sleigh heard their chime in their overcoats and indulged the contemplation of far-seeing philosophy which removes every passion from the breast.

Suddenly a lady, clad in a sea-king's accoutrements, got out and, going up to the driver, said to him in an imperative way: "Give me that whip." The driver was dazed. In a stupefied way he handed over the whip. "Now," said the little lady, "if you touch that horse again I will let you feel the weight of this whip across your shoulders. The driver down this moment and cut the harness and set the horse free. The women in the sleigh uttered, the men hung their heads. "Get down this moment," said the lady, shaking the whip over the driver. The latter, mechanically, obeyed. The harness was loosened, the horse was raised to its feet. The lady put her hand in her satchel, brought forth some biscuits, and treated the whole four horses to one each.

The effect was magical. The horse, once freed of the poor faces gave place to gladness and love and gratitude. Then the lady, very white, but as resolute as Joan of Arc ever was, entered the sleigh. The men still hung their heads in silence.

SMOOTH PACES THE FASHION.

Custom of Wearing Beards Said to Be on the Decline.

"I have been noticing the number of smooth-shaved men who have entered the hotel during the past two hours," said L. R. Morgan, according to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "Nearly one-half of them have worn no beard. The beard is rapidly going out of fashion. It is more noticeable in the East than in any other section of the country, but it can be seen in the West also. It was formerly against the law to wear a beard, except for soldiers, who were allowed the privilege in order to protect themselves from the cold.

"Then there came a revolution in custom and everybody wore beards, and the fashion declined again, so that in the early days of the existence of the United States it will be seen by looking at the pictures of the prominent men of the day, beards were worn principally by the middle and lower classes.

"Forty years ago, however, they began to come in fashion, and during the civil war the wearing of beards became almost universal. The custom is on the decline again, and men of all pursuits and callings are beginning to appear smooth-shaven."

TO CHEAPER ELECTRICITY.

Waterfalls Likely to Be Used for This Purpose in the Future.

The past fifteen years have not witnessed expected progress in the cheapening of electricity, says the Philadelphia Press. The reason is that invention has not as yet enabled more than a small percentage of the energy of coal to be turned to electricity.

A limit seems to have been fixed as to its cost when produced by coal, and any extensive introduction of it as a motive power in the near future seems to depend upon the utilization of water power.

There is a wide field for its production by this means. There are hundreds of waterfalls now running to waste over the country that can and probably will be utilized in the production of electricity if the Niagara Falls tunnel is a financial and commercial success.

BREAKING BUCKING PONIES.

"Breaking ponies of bucking is a dangerous undertaking, and few who follow it as a business live to a ripe old age," said Matthew Gibbons, of El Paso, Tex., at the Southern Hotel to a St. Louis Globe-Democrat reporter. "The wages paid to rid horses of this most undesirable trait are very high, and in consequence many young men engage in it as a vocation, but they don't last long, as a rule, being unable to withstand the terrible shaking they are bound to receive."

"It only takes a comparatively short experience in this business to have the bones so affected as to cause frequent splitting of blood. When I first went to Texas, several years ago, I had one experience of bucking, and I have never cared to repeat it since. The first buck left me about a couple of inches shorter, and I have never been the same."

"When 'so money down' system is avoided, all we ask is that you satisfy us you are the right party; so other conditions are EXACTLY THE SAME. WE MAKE NO OTHER DISTINCTION AND INTEND THIS ADVERTISEMENT TO MAKE EXACTLY WHAT IT STATES."
